A special address to alumni from President Alexander

Dear Members of the Pitt-Bradford Alumni Community:

I suspect that as you receive your daily depressing news about the economy, you may wonder how your alma mater is faring. You may wonder whether or not we’ve had to resort to some of the budget-cutting measures that many other colleges and universities have turned to in order to accommodate budget reductions. You may know that the most frequently used budget-cutting measures are faculty and staff lay-offs, salary reductions, hiring freezes, and spending restrictions.

Fortunately, we’ve not had to resort to the most drastic of these measures. Nevertheless, we have made adjustments in order to accommodate mandated budget reductions. These budget adjustments included cancellation of ongoing faculty and staff searches to fill vacant positions and imposition of spending restrictions to guard against future budget cuts.

While these adjustments will have the effect of slowing down our momentum, we will not allow them to compromise the quality of our academic programs or the service we provide to our students. We will take these reductions in stride and continue the good progress we have made during the last five years.

We do hope that you will visit Pitt-Bradford soon. Our students, faculty, and staff draw much inspiration from hearing the good news about your activities and career advances.

Warmest Regards,
Livingston Alexander
